

Remembering Mark Walters, Head Gardener 1960 - 2025

Mark's work touched every corner of the park. His practical expertise and resourcefulness were invaluable in ensuring that Waterlow Park remained a haven for nature and visitors alike. He was deeply committed to maintaining the park's beauty while balancing its historical significance and ecological health, a legacy that will endure for years to come.

Beyond his skills as a gardener, Mark was a valued collaborator and a kind presence in the park. He worked closely with volunteers, contractors and Camden Council, always striving to find practical solutions and foster teamwork. He was a trusted figure among all who cared for Waterlow Park, and his dedication inspired everyone around him.

Mark's death is a great loss not only to those who knew him personally but also to all who love Waterlow Park. His contributions have left an indelible mark on this special place, and he will be remembered with gratitude and admiration by the Friends of Waterlow Park and the wider community.
